Dear Trinity Grammar School Community

Centre for Creativity and Innovation – delay to development process

As you may be aware, Trinity Grammar has in recent months been working through an appeals process for our school's 30 year Development Plan, which includes the building of a Centre for Creativity and Innovation (CCI), at the Stillwell site on the corner of Cotham Road and Charles Street.

The CCI has been designed to inspire fresher thinking within a framework of future-focussed learning, as well as to energise and challenge Trinity students and external users of the facility.

Pleasingly, approval of the Development Plan was granted at a recent Victorian Civil and Administrative Tribunal hearing, giving the go ahead for the planning and documentation phases of the CCI to commence.

This week, however, School Council has taken a decision to put a hold on the initial development phase of the centre's build. With CCI representing the largest single investment in the school's recent history, it is important that Trinity's Interim School Council, which assumes responsibility on 1 June, has an opportunity to review the project fully.

This means that demolition of current infrastructure on the Cotham Road site will not go ahead in the coming weeks, as planned.

The school looks forward to keeping you updated on the project in the coming months.

Report on independent review into Deputy Headmaster dismissal

In April this year, Trinity received the key findings of an independent review into the March dismissal of Deputy Headmaster Rohan Brown. As you would be aware, the school quickly communicated the findings at the time and implemented the review's recommendations.

Since then, independent reviewers Raymond Finkelstein AO QC and Renee Enbom have been developing their full report. A precis of this report is now available here.

If you have any questions about the CCI project or the independent review report, please contact School Council via schoolcouncil@trinity.vic.edu.au

Yours sincerely
